La Follette Measures Brought Up by Leader Underwood and Referred to Ways and Means Committee.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Bulletin, Washington, July 27.—The Eristow-Lodge sugar bill fixing the tariff on refined sugar at $1.60 per hundred pounds was adopted by the senate this afternoon sitting as a committee of the whole 37 to 25.

Washington, D.C., July 27.—An agreement between regular and progressive republicans was reached today for the passage of a sugar tariff bill fixing a duty of 4.00 per one hundred pounds in place of the present rate of $1.90. This pact, which it was believed would hold throughout the day, provided the progressives should stand with the regular republicans deserting their previous alliance with the democrats.

A bitter attack by Senator Lodge upon American cane sugar refiners opened the sugar tariff fight in the senate today. He charged the refiners with "tempting to strike down their legitimate, the beet sugar producers, by fighting for free or reduced duties on raw sugar. Mr. Lodge endorsed a substitute bill he had reported from the finance committee which would abolish the Dutch standard test and the tariff differentials of the present law.

Excise Tax Bill.
The fight over the excise tax bill which was returned to the house today passed by the senate will center around the amendments for a tariff commission and repeal of Canadian reciprocity. House democrats are opposed to both provisions, although majority leader Underwood today said he believed a compromise would be reached and the bill sent to the president.

Wool Bill to House.
The La Follette wool bill passed by the senate Thursday was brought up in the house today by majority leader Underwood and referred to the ways and means committee.

Representative Payne, author of the republican wool tariff said he had contemplated offering his measure as a substitute but would not do so at the present time. The ways and means committee will report the bill back promptly and ask for a conference with the senate.

One Warship Likely.

Leaders in the house who want at least one battleship this year now have a prospect of success. They proposed today that another democratic caucus would be called within the next two weeks and a one ship program would go through.

Chairman Padgett, of the naval affairs committee will call up the bill
Tuesday and send it back to congress.
Even with the one battleship he claims the democratic bill will be at least four million dollars under the republican bill.

Deslovers, who is being held for the was arraigned in court again today for preliminary hearing. The man strenu-man Deslovers was arrested because he had lived with the woman and because he was reported to have been the murder was committed have not been determined. Every effort of the

Reminiscences of the Civil War By S. C. Burnham

An interesting relic of the Civil War Times is possessed by S. C. Burnham of this city, who has a copy of the Memphis Daily Bulletin, published in Memphis, Tenn., Wednesday August 24, 1864, a few days after General Forrest, one of the rebel commanders, made his raid on Memphis. The paper contains quite a full description of the raid.

Gen. Forrest with his men, mostly cavalry, who were located at Oxford, Miss., made a sudden march on Memphis where the Union troops under Generals Washburn, Buckland, Hurlbut and Dunstan were located. The object of the forced march was to take the Union forces by surprise, capture their generals, hold them off for a while and in the confusion receive supplies. Their object was partially accomplished in that they surprised the Union forces, but the Union generals managed to escape, although General Washburn, it is said had to leave his headquarters in rather scanty attire, and the planned retreat of the rebels was turned into a rout. The Union forces assembling speedily and putting Forrest's forces to flight.

Mr. Burnham was a member of the Fortieth Wisconsin, which was stationed just outside of Memphis at the time of the raid. The Fortieth took a prominent part in the skirmishing with the rebels as they were retreating from Memphis and conducted themselves bravely in the fight. The Fortieth Wisconsin was one of the hundred day regiments sent out in 1864 to aid General Grant in the east and General Sherman in the west, in putting down the Rebels.

Although their period of service was not long, these regiments aided the Union generals greatly in their campaigns. A number of the company to which Mr. Burnham belonged were students in the Janesville high school at the time they enlisted, and young men, some of whom were not yet out of their teens. The captain of the company was the principal of the high school. The regiment was under command of Colonel Ray, but on the day that Forrest made his raid, Lieut. Col. Tallows, now Bishop Falls, of Chicago, assumed the command of the regiment, and led them against the Rebels. The Rebel forces were commanded by General Forrest in person.

Among the numerous items printed in the paper is the National Union presidential ticket, Abraham Lincoln of Illinois and Andrew Johnson of Tennessee being the candidates for president and vice-president, respectively. In another place mention is made of the sentence of a sister of Captain Lundy for smuggling. This Captain Lundy, followed with the Union army, and it was afterwards learned was a rebel spy in the camp. He probably had some connection with Forrest's raid into Memphis, but was shot in the engagement.

The fighting between the two forces was quite sharp and the engagement proved to be more than a slight skirmish. The losses on the Union side were estimated at 15 killed, 50 wounded and 140 missing, a total loss of 205. The Rebels on the other hand are estimated to have lost 270 men, 50 killed, 190 wounded and 20 captured. A portion of the account of the raid, as published in the Memphis Bulletin, is given below:

The citizens of South Memphis were startled from their slumbers at an early hour this morning by the noise of musketry, accompanied by yelling and rattling of horses' hoofs through the streets. What the strange sound was nobody seemed to know, though the general belief was that it was caused by a mutiny in Irving block, or among the soldiers. Looking from the windows of their homes, however, they discovered groups of rebel cavalry flying in every direction. Instantly the alarm spread through the city, and officers, soldiers and citizens, rushed to their respective camps and armories to prepare for defense. The militia and provost guard were soon ready for action. By this time the rebels were scattered in squads through the city, and skirmishing became lively; musketry was heard on all hands, and the excitement became intense.

The Advance of the Raiders.
On Thursday morning at 11 o'clock the 16th Tennessee cavalry were on picket duty at Oxford, Mississippi, where Forrest and his command were stationed. A courier rode in hot haste to the lines, and immediately they were ordered to Oxford. At five o'clock, with twenty rounds of ammunition and short rations, they left with other regiments in a westerly direction, and after riding all night, taking a semi-circular course, struck the Mississippi & Tennessee railroad at Panola, thirty-two miles, early the next morning. Here they were furnished with six days' rations, part of which was carried in wagons, of which there were ten accompanying the expedition.

They rode hard that day (Friday) and in the evening encamped six miles above Como. At 4 a. m. Saturday they resumed the march, and soon after arrived at Hickahol and Cold Water, when they built bridges, and succeeded in crossing in about half an hour before sundown the same evening. They halted for awhile after crossing to rest, and soon after started on a quick pace, by the Herando road, towards Memphis. At 3 o'clock they dashed through our picket lines on the same road, and after brisk skirmishing in which a few were killed and wounded, a portion of the force entered the city.

The Force That Forrest Had.
The expedition was under command of Major General Forrest, in person, and consisted of the following regiments, with four guns, two of which were used on the route. 2d Tenn. cavalry, Col. Barlow; 12th Tenn. cavalry, Col. Nealy; 14th Tenn. cavalry, Col. Longwood; 15th Tenn. cavalry, Col. Stewart; 16th Tenn. cavalry, Col. John Newson; 22d Tenn. cavalry, Col. Russell; 2d Missouri cavalry, Col. Bob McCullough; 18th Miss. cavalry, Colonel Chalmers.

Irving Prison, with the intention of releasing the prisoners, on Sunday morning, Captain Hoyt, the efficient officer in charge, was in bed having received no intimation of the raid. It was then about four o'clock. He was aroused by an orderly. Rising like a flash, he summoned the guard, a small portion of the 113th Illinois infantry, about him. A high fence stood between them and the rebels there was no chance to fire with effect. "To the upper windows, boys," shouted the captain, and leading the way, he was followed by his men. There they found an advantageous position. Then ascending to the roof, Captain Hoyt hailed Major Stubbs of the 8th Iowa, who was collecting a few of his regiment on the corner of Court and Third streets, to come to his assistance. "All right, captain," replied the gallant major, "I'll be there." He came with his men, and simultaneously with the guard in the windows, opened a fire on the rebels, that sent them skeddaddling faster than they came.

When the rebel army dashed up to

The Doings of the Raiders in the City.
Arriving at Beal street, the rebels divided off in several squads and struck for the Gayoso House, Hospital, Living Block and General Washburn's Headquarters on Union street. The latter was first visited by a force of about 200, under Lieut. Col. Jesse Forrest, who entered and found it deserted, the General and his staff having but a moment before escaped. They received warning from Colonel Starr, of the 6th Illinois cavalry, of the approach of the rebels. He had been at the front and dashed in ahead. The General sought refuge in the fort and escaped. His staff also escaped. Lieut. Col. Forrest remained in the Headquarters some fifteen minutes and brought forth Gen. Washburn's overcoat and some papers, after which he started for the Gayoso House, with his force.

Failure of the Raiders and Preparations to Face Them.

After making an ineffectual attempt to capture General Hurlbut at the Gayoso House, which they surrounded, and in which they did some damage, by breaking doors, watches and segs, they captured several prisoners, two of whom they afterwards murdered. Squads of them made demonstrations on other points, but accomplished very little, and after about an hour's stay retired from the city on the double quick, by the Herando road pursued by Gen. Dunstan and such Federal cavalry as could be immediately procured.

They took with them about 250 prisoners, (mostly hundred day men) and perhaps a hundred horses. Gen. Washburn lost a couple of fine horses. The rebels were not able to carry off any other plunder. The 8th Iowa boys fired on them wherever they made their appearance about the streets. Quite a number of rebels were killed or captured. Gen. Buckland, with his staff, turned out promptly and rode through the streets, collecting forces and organizing resistance, and when it was discovered that they the rebels had retired, he prepared for rapid pursuit. Gen. Washburn, when he escaped, repaired to the Fort, and from there issued his orders for the capture of the rebels. He met the invaders in about an hour he returned to his headquarters, that had been pillaged of papers and an old coat or two, and yesterday was actively engaged in official duties.

The dash failing in its great object, the capture of General Washburn was a miserable failure. It cost the rebels men and wear of horses, and accomplished nothing of the slightest military consequence.

What They Would Have Done.
If the rebels had succeeded in capturing General Washburn, Buckland, Hurlbut and Dunstan, they would have tried to hold the city long enough during the subsequent confusion to obtain supplies, but their failure to capture any General disarranged their plans. Their first check was at Irving Block where they stood for only a single fire of the guards, who called after them as they retreated.

The Militia Promptly Responded.
When the alarm was first given by the firing of the cannon as a signal for the militia to repair to their several armories just after the rebel check at Irving Block, the rebels took a seat on the ground, and seemed to be waiting for them to come. They seemed to have imagined that cannonading against them was begun at some point, and they at once commenced to retire. With the utmost promptitude the great majority of the militia repaired to their armories, and without exception evinced a cheerfulness and readiness to comfort the rebels.

Under Gen. Dunstan's directions they with vigorous celerity tore up every bridge between the Mississippi river and Beale street over the bayou, and then erected barricades, behind which they felt confident they could successfully defend themselves. The militia of Memphis has been ridiculed and undervalued, but in this emergency it has shown the most gratifying bravery and patriotism. Officers and men without exception vied with the brave Federal soldiers in cheerful readiness to meet the enemy.

The 49th Wisconsin infantry, Colonel Ray, were encamped on the fair grounds, about three miles from the scene of action, when they received word from the 3rd Illinois cavalry, a little before daylight, that their camp had been surprised. They formed in line of battle immediately, and received orders from Colonel Hoag, commanding the 1st brigade, to march to the Herando road at once. Colonel Ray went to the ordinance department to obtain ammunition, as his men had only thirty rounds each, and Lieutenant Colonel Ballows assumed the command. On reaching the Herando road they found the rebels in line of battle with three or four pieces of artillery in action. They were ordered to the extreme front to support the 3rd Missouri battery, and took a position about 80 rods in front of the battery, lying on their breasts, and about 100 rods from the rebel front, composed of artillery and sharpshooters. The rebels at once opened with a heavy fire of shot, shell and musketry on the 49th men, wounding three men. The 3rd Missouri battery then returned a sharp fire, simultaneous with the 7th Wisconsin battery on the left. The fight continued without intermission for half an hour, the 49th between two fires throughout and behaving nobly. The fire on the rebel side then slackened. Col. Ray appeared with ammunition and took command. The 29th and 41st Wisconsin regiments then formed in line of battle behind the 49th, which ordered from the headquarters to move forward and support the cavalry in pursuit of the rebels, who commenced a hasty retreat.

They marched for some time through cotton fields and struck the Herando road on the left, a mile in advance of any other regiments. The pursuit was continued about two and a half miles down the road, the cavalry continually skirmishing with the rebels, when orders were received to return to camp, which they reached at four o'clock in the afternoon, with only a loss of five wounded, though continually exposed to a heavy fire during the engagement.

Why Buy a 1912 Car When the 1913 R-C-H Is Here?

THE CAR

STRIPPED of all its extra equipment, judged on specifications and construction alone, the R-C H would still be in a class of its own at the price.

This is a statement that you yourself can easily verify by inspection and comparison.

Sturdiness, power, beauty, comfort, economy of operation—all are there.

But in addition, the R-C-H offers you every accessory essential to motoring satisfaction, and every item of the highest quality. These alone would add several hundred dollars to the cost of the car if you bought them separately at retail. And that's what you'll have to do if you buy an unequipped car.

Truly, in offering such a car at such a price we are making history—and one of the most wonderful chapters that the industry has evolved.

Bobby Wallace, ex-manager of the St. Louis Browns, may soon have to step down and out of the major leagues. He has been a long time with the majors—about 17 years—and has evidently outlived his usefulness.

Manager Stovall intimates Wallace may be let go to a minor league team, but the old veteran says he will never go back to the minors. The chief objection to Wallace is that his salary is too high for the class of work that he is able to do.

Ty Cobb, of the Detroit Tigers, has struck a fast pace, and this season his batting average is the best ever, .422. Cobb's grand average since he entered the American league in 1896 has been .365 1-6. For five successive seasons has his name graced the top of American league averages. Cobb seems to be getting better every season. It begins to look as if he will surpass all the records established by such old masters of the bat as Pop Anson, Ed. Deleahanty, Hans Wagner and Larry Lajoie.

Elly Papke and Eddie McGeorty will try conclusions in a ten-round go at Kenosha, Wis., on Labor Day.

Jack Johnson is reaching out to conquer more worlds. Having won what honors there were in heavy weight prize fighting, he is now going to try baseball and see if he can't outdo Ty Cobb. Jack has made application for the first base position on the American Giants, a colored semi-professional team, and may get the job. He is now reporting every David Bruce-Brown, twice winner of the American Grand Prize, and prominent contender for first honors in the recent French classics is the first star driver to file an entry in the 1912, 111, road races to be run Aug. 30-31 by the Chicago Automobile club and the Elgin road race association. He probably will pilot a high powered foreign machine.

Two other drivers that have promised to compete are Ralph Mulford and Erwin Bergdoll. They are both autoists of experience.

The call of the diamond is proving strong for Lieut. George W. Beavers Jr., U. S. A. He wants to leave the army and become a professional ball player.

BRAKES OFTEN CAUSE TROUBLE WITH TIRES.

How Brakes May be Used Without Ruining Tires is Important Knowledge for Auto Owner.

Sudden braking is harmful to tires. It causes the wheels to be dragged over the ground, with the result that the tire tread is quickly worn away. Occasionally motorists apply their brakes so forcibly that the wheels are locked. Not only is this absolutely ruinous to envelopes, but according to the Michelin man, it is not generally the quickest way to stop a car. A demonstration of the same principle is often seen in starting a railroad train. If the throttle is opened suddenly the wheels of the locomotive will spin around without gripping the rails and the train stands still, whereas if the steam be applied slowly the cars are set in motion at once.

Moreover, if the brakes act with unequal force, tire trouble is likely to result. One of the wheels will probably run free, while the other is checked suddenly. The tire on the latter wheel will soon show signs of wear.

If the springs are weak, bad jars will cause the upper part of the tires to rub against the mudguards. In chain-driven cars the driving-chains often cause injury of a somewhat similar nature. If they are slack, a swinging motion will cause them to strike the sides of the tires. If the chain line is too close to the wheels or if the chain bolts are too long the envelope will be marked with oblique scratches. These cuts are crossed at regular intervals, being produced first when the bolts strike the upper and again when they strike the lower part of the tire walls. All these matters require the motorist's careful attention.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

New York, July 27.—A truly national welcome awaits the American victors in the Olympic athletic games in Stockholm, when they arrive here next Monday on the steamship Vaderland. BASEBALL NOTES.

The Columbus Club, of the American Association, has released Rudy Hulswitt to the Louisville Club.

Hal Chase has regained his old-time form and is playing real ball for the New York Highlanders.

Manager Frank Chance, of the Cubs, used 15 men against Philadelphia recently, but the Quakers copped 9 to 8.

The Washington team did great work on its home lot and will now try for another clean-up on the Western end of the circuit.

The International League teams are running a coriding good race this season with Rochester, Baltimore and Toronto showing the way.

From all accounts Manager Doolin, of the Quakers, annexed a genuine pitcher when he signed Eppa Rixey, the former University of Virginia star.

Frank Fogarty, the "Dublin Minstrel," who is traveling with the White Sox, has written a new song entitled "Stop Your Kidding, Gleason."

Don't overlook Ed. Konetchy, of the Cardinals, when you sport about star first basemen. "Big Ed's" record of playing 52 games without an error places him with the best in the business.

Credit for the greatest work with the stick this season belongs to Ty Cobb. In the double headers played July 17-19 (no game July 18) in Philadelphia, Ty made 14 hits with a total of 27 bases.

Several major league clubs have asked the management of the Portsmouth, O., team to set a price on Pitcher "Cy" Marshall. He is considered the premier twirler of the Ohio State league.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

Some one said, a time ago, "At the age of twenty-one a man starts in to reform the world, but at fifty he is busy trying to keep the world from reforming him."

There is more than a grain of truth in the statement, for age and experience have everything to do with the viewpoint of life.

The young man, fresh from school, is full of theories and as he looks out upon a world, which is far from ideal, the demand for reform seems so urgent that he wastes no time in applying himself to the task.

At the age of thirty much of his ambition is expended, and when the milestone which marks middle life is passed he is usually content to let nature take its course and settle down to become a cog in the great machine.

The present generation is an exception to old time custom for the spirit of boyish restlessness has taken possession of us as a people, and the reformer of all ages and conditions is abroad in the land, with no lack of leaders who aspire to fame through revolutionary methods.

When Lincoln Steffens, the noted muckraker, writer, defended the McNamara Brothers at the time of the trial, referring to them as "healthy, good-tempered boys," the people were not very much surprised, but when this same man Steffens appeared as a witness at the Darrow trial one day last week and defended his action by claiming that there was a difference between individual and social crime, the people began to ask themselves, "What sort of a reformer is this Steffens anyway?"

While it is true that both Darrow and Steffens knew of the McNamara Brothers guilt long before they made their confession, and doubtless excused the crime because of the social feature, it is hardly fair to organized labor to commit the organization to that sort of defense, because the fact is well known that the rank and file are not in sympathy with lawlessness.

General Otis, the owner of the Los Angeles Times, has long been clearly hated by labor agitators, because of his attitude in regard to labor. The wrecking of his property, which resulted in the murder of twenty-one innocent people, was a personal attack on him, and Steffens claims that it was in a measure excusable, because a great principle was involved.

More than this he covers himself with the cloak of Christianity, and masquerades as a Christian anarchist. Can't you see the danger in that sort of reform? If it should ever get a foothold, God save the nation for the red flag would soon be the national emblem.

A contented and happy people have been led to believe that they are no longer free and independent, but that the right of self-government has been usurped by the bosses, who are owned and controlled by special interests and big business.

Today the people are clamoring for "representative government" but with a faint conception of what it means, for any sort of government, in a republic, depends on organization, which means that parties always have and always will continue to have and will continue to rule, unless the people become careless, as they did in Wisconsin, by placing the power in the hands of a single man.

This concentration of power is called reform, but it is a backward step and dangerous to national life. Senator La Follette is known as a reformer. His fight on railroads and corporations, in the interests of "God's patient poor," gave him a large and enthusiastic following and when all parties were thoroughly disorganized he assumed command and his deluded victims are paying the freight.

What he accomplished in the state inspired ambition to become the nation's dictator, but the field was too large for him and his efforts resulted in ignominious failure and but for the fact that Colonel Roosevelt, with his strong personality, stood ready to come to his relief, progressive reform would have died a natural death.

Political history has been making very fast in this country, during the past few weeks but in the making it is plain to be seen that personal ambition is the controlling influence.

The new party about to be formed is a Roosevelt party pure and simple, without the man it hasn't a leg to stand on. The forces back of it were unwilling to support either La Follette or Cummings, both recognized progressive leaders.

Failing to stampede the Chicago convention he adopted as his slogan one of the old Mosaic commandments, "Thou shalt not steal," and this batted the party. His manager, Dixon, says that the colonel is no longer a republican, and he ought to know.

What are the facts concerning the Chicago convention? Simply these. It was a republican convention handled by a republican committee in precisely the same way that it has been done for the past half century.

The southern representatives supported the administration the same as they always have done. This may be all wrong but the time to change it is not on the eve of a convention, nor while it is in session.

The charge of theft is a serious charge and the colonel ought to think twice before making it. His advice to presidential electors, not to vote for Taft, is dangerous to young men and it influences old men like Col. John Hicks of Oshkosh, whose name was attested to the government pay roll so long that it became a habit, from which it is difficult to recover.

The nation may have reached a period in its history where party rule should be abandoned and the reigns of government placed in the hands of men like Bryan, Roosevelt, and La Follette. The people are bound to try the experiment and time will tell.

It is very evident that times have changed and the young man of twenty-one no longer holds a monopoly on reform.

BUGS.

For many years a great Frenchman, J. H. Fabre, has studied the habits and manner of life of bugs.

You crush them with your feet, unthinking. To you they are just bugs; to Fabre they are sentient beings, almost people.

The bug's strongest instinct is the proper protection of its young, and its strong sense of parenthood leads it to turn architect and builder. It builds some wonderfully fine apartments.

The bug builds warehouses and storage plants, where it provides food for its young. It pays more attention to ventilation than do some people, providing air chambers. Then, having made suitable preparation, it lays its eggs and goes its way content to die.

Can you beat the bug?
Sets you to thinking.

For instance, we people of today boast of our civilization. And what is our civilization? Go to the big books. The authors tell you in big words that civilization is the production of surplus wealth, the organization of industry, the dispersion of thrift among the people, and—that's about all.

Now—A hundred years ago the great Frenchman Guizot told us that civilization of that sort was no better than that of the bees and the ants. And now Fabre tells us the bugs are civilized that much.

The bees produce surplus wealth; they organize industry and disperse thrift better than we. And so of the bugs.

More than that—Bees and ants and bugs organize governments. Why, the ant hill under your feet is better governed, better policed—there are more law and order—than in any people city of the world.

Well, then—Is it not plain that we must have a different definition of civilization or the bugs will beat us?

Let's do so. Civilization is more than wealth and industry and thrift and invention. What more? Civilization is the near realization of the ideals of the best men and women of the race. Isn't that high above the plane of material things? We must aim higher than dollars or—The bugs will beat us.

Paraphrasing the words of another, one easily might put into the mouth of M. Fabre the saying:
"The more I know about some people the more I think of bugs."

The Statesman.

And tell him of their urgent needs:
When fearful war besets the land
Until the nation's great heart

When hostile nations do enforce
Their policies and chosen creeds;
When mighty trust magnates en-

And satisfy their own pet greeds;
When others fare forth to the fray
Upon their champion battle steeds;
When others do the hero act
And gather fame for valiant deeds;

When others win the victories
Of which a thankful nation reads
The statesman does his noble part
For he sends out the garden seeds.

There is a new play called "The are no presidential possibilities in it.

EVANSVILLE BOYS BACK FROM OUTING

Eleven Y. M. C. A. Lads Enjoyed
Two Weeks at Boys' Camp,
Phantom Lake—Other
News.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Evansville, July 25.—Charles Atkinson and the eleven Y. M. C. A. boys who spent two weeks at the boys' camp at Phantom Lake have returned in fine health and spirits. Flag raising and morning salute, at 6:50 was a part of each day's program. Each tent group was stationed the same distance from the flag pole, and at given signal would race for the pole. The first one there would fire the cannon and the second would raise the flag.

The Evansville boys managed to raise the flag twice and fire the cannon once; which was quite a feat as there were one hundred and forty boys in the camp. They also won the tent group race for having the best tent, and succeeded in holding fourth place at the finish. They were also awarded the table banner five times for having the best table manners, and best washed dishes, which enabled them to finish their two weeks in the land and bring home the banner for the local Y. M. C. A.

The boys who went from Evansville were: Richard Evans, Martin Colony, Loyal Baker, Arden Patterson, Earl Phillips, Clark Carlson, Bruce Meyers, Fred Gullock, Frederick Chatterton, Bryon Pritchard, and Chas. Hyne.

Cromwell's Army.
The famous army with which the Protector overthrew the tyranny of King Charles was officially known as the "New Model." The strength of the New Model in all arms—infantry, artillery and cavalry—footed up about 50,000 men. The "Ironsides," as they were more familiarly called, rarely lost a battle. Before the push of their pikes and the rush of their cavalry the plumed hosts of the king disappeared like chaff before the wind. The New Model was the most democratic army ever known, and at the same time, the best disciplined.

ROY NEWMAN SURPRISED BY FRIENDS LAST NIGHT.

Evening Spent in Dancing—Supper Served at Midnight—Occasion Young Man's Birthday.

Roy Newman was very pleasantly surprised by his many friends last evening at his home on Milton ave. the occasion being his twenty-first birthday. The evening was spent in dancing and at midnight supper was served. Mr. Newman was presented with a gold signet ring. All who attended passed a very pleasant evening.

Various Degrees of Envy.

Envy is a compound of grief and anger. The degrees of this passion depend chiefly on the nearness or remoteness of the objects, as to circumstances. If one who is forced to walk on foot envies a great man for keeping a coach and six, it will never be with that violence, or give him that disturbance which it may to a man who keeps a coach himself, but can only afford to drive with four horses. The symptoms of envy are various and as hard to describe as those of the plague. Among the fair the disease is very common, and the signs of it are very conspicuous in their opinions and censures of one another.—Bernard Mandeville.

Business Development.

If in the normal business you have to take risks you must, of course, do so, but to seek them for the sake of extra gains is disastrous. Rapid revolutions may sometimes be successful, but evolutions always mean growth.—Sid J. Knoll, in the Organist.

CRUSHED UNDER CARS WHEN TRAIN STRUCK THE STREET SWEEPER

Myron Sperry Killed Early This Morning on North Academy Street Machine Was Demolished.

Falling to notice the approach of a loaded gravel train, Myron Sperry was drawn under the cars and killed about 1:40 o'clock this morning when the street sweeper which he was driving was struck at the North Academy street crossing. The sweeper was demolished, and though the horses escaped death one of them was seriously injured.

Sperry, who has been driving the city sweeper for Peter Goodman the last two seasons, had just finished sweeping the brick streets on the east side of the river. After making his first trip down Academy street, he started to make a turn at the railway crossing, as was his custom, so as to sweep the pavement clear out to its end. While he was making the turn the first car of the train of six gravel cars backing down from the North Academy street crossing struck the street sweeper, throwing the horses and dragging the rear wheels, the driver the tool box, brush, and other parts of the machine to the farther end of the station platform.

Conductor Anderson and Switchman Grogan, who were seated on the car that struck the sweeper shouted and waved their lanterns at Sperry in a frantic endeavor to warn of his danger, but his back was turned toward them and he evidently did not hear the train approach.

Not until several minutes after the train was brought to a stop was the train crew able to find Sperry's body. It was discovered wedged between the rear trucks of the gravel car. Dr. E. F. Woods and the ambulance had been summoned in the meantime, but when the doctor arrived he found that the man was already dead, evidently having met instant death. The left side of his head was badly cut and bruised and several bones in his body were broken. The body was removed to the undertaking rooms of Nelson Brothers.

The street sweeper was so badly broken up by the train as to put it out of service. The front truck and tool chest were thrown upon the station platform near the ticket window. The sweeper was cut in two, the wheels and tongue broken, and parts of the apparatus scattered along the track for some distance. The harness was cut to pieces, hardly a sound part remaining.

One of the horses met with severe injuries. It was found tangled up in the crossing gate and evidently had been thrown quite high for hair from its mane was found up above the iron support. It was badly bruised and seems to have suffered internal injuries. The other animal was not hurt. It was found with all the harness for the front of the collar which was nearly torn in two.

Mr. Sperry was about sixty years of age and had lived in this city several years, rooming at the home of Mrs. Harding on Jackson street, opposite the Presbyterian church. He has one son living in Janesville, Louis Sperry, 462 North Main street, two in Evansville, Edgar and William Sperry, and another, Harvey Sperry, lives in Madison. A daughter, Mrs. Blanche Paulson, also lives in Evansville.

The remains of Mr. Sperry will be taken to Evansville tomorrow and funeral services and burial will be there.

CHILD HAD NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH

Presence of Mind of Motorman Kelly Saved Infant Child of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Gaulke This Morning.

William, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Gaulke, 405 S. South Franklin street, had his lower jawbone broken on the left side and received a cut below the left eye when he was struck by a street car almost in front of the home of his parents on South Franklin street about ten minutes to eleven o'clock this morning. The little boy, who is not yet four years of age, was playing on the sidewalk in front of his home, and started to run across the street just as the car came along. That he was not killed was due to the presence of mind of Motorman John Kelly, who was running the car, and the fact that the car was running slow. Kelly reversed the motor as soon as he saw the child start across the street and brought it to a stop within a very short distance. The child apparently was unaware of the danger and walked across the tracks directly in front of the car. When the motorman sounded the warning bell the youngster turned directly toward the car, falling forward on the fender. Motorman Kelly picked up the child and carried it to the home of his parents and Dr. E. F. Woods was called to dress the injuries.

CITY WILL REPLACE WRECKED SWEEPER

Council Will Take Prompt Action in Matter—Reduced to Hand Sweeping for the Present.

Prompt action will be taken by the City Council toward replacing the street sweeper that was demolished when struck by a train early this morning. They have not yet held a conference or come to an agreement as to what kind of a street cleaner they will purchase, whether a sweeper or a flusher. Mayor Falters looks with favor upon the plan of using a flusher, many cities having found them more satisfactory than sweepers. No dust is raised and the street dirt is washed into the sewers, making it unnecessary to load it upon wagons and haul it away. Local conditions determine to a great extent the success with which flushers can be used, the most important being the ability of the sewers to carry away the material washed into them. As the main sewers in this city are easily flushed from the river this objection would not seem to hold here.

For the present the city is reduced to cleaning the streets by hand, a method still in vogue in some of the largest cities, and in some cities found to be no more expensive than machine cleaning, as almost as many men are required to sweep the dirt into piles and load it as are needed for doing the entire work.

D. W. WATT Tells of the Last Season of Adam Forepaugh's Life

No history of the circus world could be written without giving due prominence to Adam Forepaugh. This man stands prominently out in the show business as the only circus man who during his long career with the white tops, never had a partner, never asked anyone's advice and always handled his own business just as he thought best.

P. T. Barnum, the other big show man of the Nineteenth century, had many partners during his long career and always associated with himself the best material that he could obtain to make his business a financial success. These two show men, Barnum and Forepaugh, were for many years bitter rivals and not until they formed a pact, dividing the country between them so as not to conflict as to dates, it was nip and tuck which show was the best.

If Barnum imported some strange weird European act, Forepaugh sent his agents at a double quick for the Continent to secure something a little better. If Barnum had a herd of trained seals, Forepaugh had one also. When Barnum brought over his pink, whitewashed or white elephant, Forepaugh used a lot of money and had paint and landed his in this country a few weeks ahead of his rivals.

It was a costly business, this rivalry between the two big shows, but the profits were big and they could afford it. Barnum had been a show man, of the museum type, before he became a circus magnate, while Forepaugh had been a butcher, and a horse trader when he joined the ranks of the saw dust ring owners. They were brought up in different schools but they both attained greatness in their chosen profession.

It takes more than money to conduct a circus. It takes brains and good common sense. There are times when the circus manager must face unusual propositions and face them right, or lose thereby. Adam Forepaugh had many such experiences and his good sense carried him through where other men have failed.

Today the Ringlings have swallowed up the biggest show in the country. They have continued the old Barnum show under its old name. Barnum and Bailey, they have their own show and they are interested in numerous other smaller enterprises, including the Buffalo Bill Wild West. Back in the Seventies and Eighties, there were put two big shows in the country. The Barnum and Bailey, and the Adam Forepaugh aggregations. These two rival organizations toured the country from early spring to late fall.

D. W. Watt, was with the Forepaugh show for many years, knew the German butcher boy well, and could if he would, tell some most amusing and instructive stories of his characteristics. Adam Forepaugh was a character. All who ever came in contact with him liked him. He was honest, of that rugged type, and had wonderful judgement of human nature.

Unfortunately in his early childhood he was sadly deficient of education but he trusted his minor work to trusted employees and was seldom mistaken in his judgment of human nature. When he passed away his show passed with him. He left no monument of his name behind him, merely a memory of his past greatness. Men who worked for him in the olden days are found in many of the leading shows of the country today or running small ones of their own. They all speak most kindly of their former boss which is a sure sign his teachings are not forgotten.

The season of '89 opened in Philadelphia early in April and little did anyone think around the management of the greatest single handed showman that ever lived. For Adam Forepaugh in his thirty years' career in the show business never had a partner. He owned and controlled everything about the show, ran all his own privileges and was the absolute manager of all.

The 24th of the following January in 1890, the great manager died at his home at 1628 Green street, and there were hundreds of old timers, as they were called, men who had been in the different departments of the show for many years lost a good home, for a good man with Adam Forepaugh in any department was always appreciated.

Adam Forepaugh was a German by birth. His parents being poor, when 14 years of age he went to work in a butcher shop in Philadelphia and stayed there four years, thoroughly learning the business in all departments. Later he quit the business and commenced buying horses on a small scale and finally started an omnibus line on Broad street, and about the same time got a small interest in the street railway there with E. A. Widener, and by the way this man's son, George Widener, the millionaire traction manager, who lost his life in the Titanic.

In about '61 Mr. Forepaugh sold his interest to Mr. Widener to buy cavalry horses for the government. This he followed till the summer '63, and then hearing of the death of Jerry Mable of Delavan, Wis., who was owner and manager of the Mable Show, he came to Delavan in the fall of '62 and bought the Mable Show of the widow, paying $45,000 in cash for it, and driving it overland to Chicago where he shipped it over the Pennsylvania road to Philadelphia. Here he remodeled the show, adding many new features and started it out in the spring under the name of Adam Forepaugh.

Mrs. Mable later married a man by the name of Phillips who died in '73, but Mrs. Phillips is still living in Delavan in a beautiful home and her two sons run a fine summer resort at Lake Delavan.

Mr. Forepaugh's new venture in the show business was a success from the start. He had about two block of grounds in what was known as Spring Garden in Philadelphia and there he erected the finest winter-quarters ever built to house a circus. While his education was limited he had a good business head on him and the greatest memory of any man I ever knew, and was always there afternoon and night, sitting in what was known as the Lookout Chair, which was a high chair at the front door where he could watch everything that was going on and it was he who counted every ticket that was taken in, afternoon and night. I all the years that I was with him he never was away from the show more than three days.

In all the years of his opposition to the Barnum show, and their fight for supremacy, while Mr. Barnum had several partners, Adam Forepaugh was alone and without any advice from anyone. Later when peace was declared and the country was divided for five years to come, Mr. and Mrs. P. T. Barnum came to the show and were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Forepaugh for a week.

They had a great time rehearsing some of their experiences when in opposition and when the Barnums left for home I said to Mr. Forepaugh, "You certainly had a nice visit while they were here," and the old man looking over his glasses with a twinkle in his eye said, "Yes, but do you know I counted my elephants every night when he was here."

Delavan, where the Mable show came from originally was known for many years as the home of more showmen than any town in the country and many a head stone in the cemetery at Delavan marks the resting place of men famous in the circus business many years ago.

The season of '89 we took all the principle cities on the road through to Chicago and stopped there for two weeks. Later we came on west and showed in Janesville.

In showing in Watertown, Wis., the three Herbert brothers went down town to do a little trading in the evening and coming back to the show grounds they came through the railroad yards where three husky tramps undertook to hold them up and rob them. But they had struck the wrong men.

The Herbert Brothers were three famous athletes and when they got through with the tramps it was a question where to send them, to the hospital or morgue.

The show this season only went west as far as Omaha and Omaha this season was the banner one day stand of the year.

T. D. Russell, who still resides in this city was treasurer of the privileges this year and in these days would have his hands full checking up and keeping accounts in all the different departments which he had charge of.

Dr. Carson, the great rifle shot was one of the features of the show this year with the wild west and the overland mail coach and the successful attempt of the Indians to get the mail, who were driven back by the cowboys.

At St. Joseph, Mo., while we were making a parade a little boy of five years was standing on the corner of the street and when the ten ponies on the bird cage swung around the corner the little fellow became excited and ran out to grab one of them.

He was knocked down by the pony and before anyone could reach him the wheels had passed over his head and he was killed, and while it was an accident and no one to blame, the show had to settle. Though we did a big business at St. Joseph the surplus of the day's receipts were not enough to pay the bill.

In many instances the show, while not to blame, for accidents of different kinds, they almost invariably had to settle, for they had no time to stop off and fight for their rights.

From here we took a southeasterly trip back toward home or Philadelphia and about the middle of November we closed one of the most successful seasons the show had ever seen at Delance, Ohio, and little did anyone think that day that this would be the last season under the management of the grand old man.

FORTY YEARS AGO

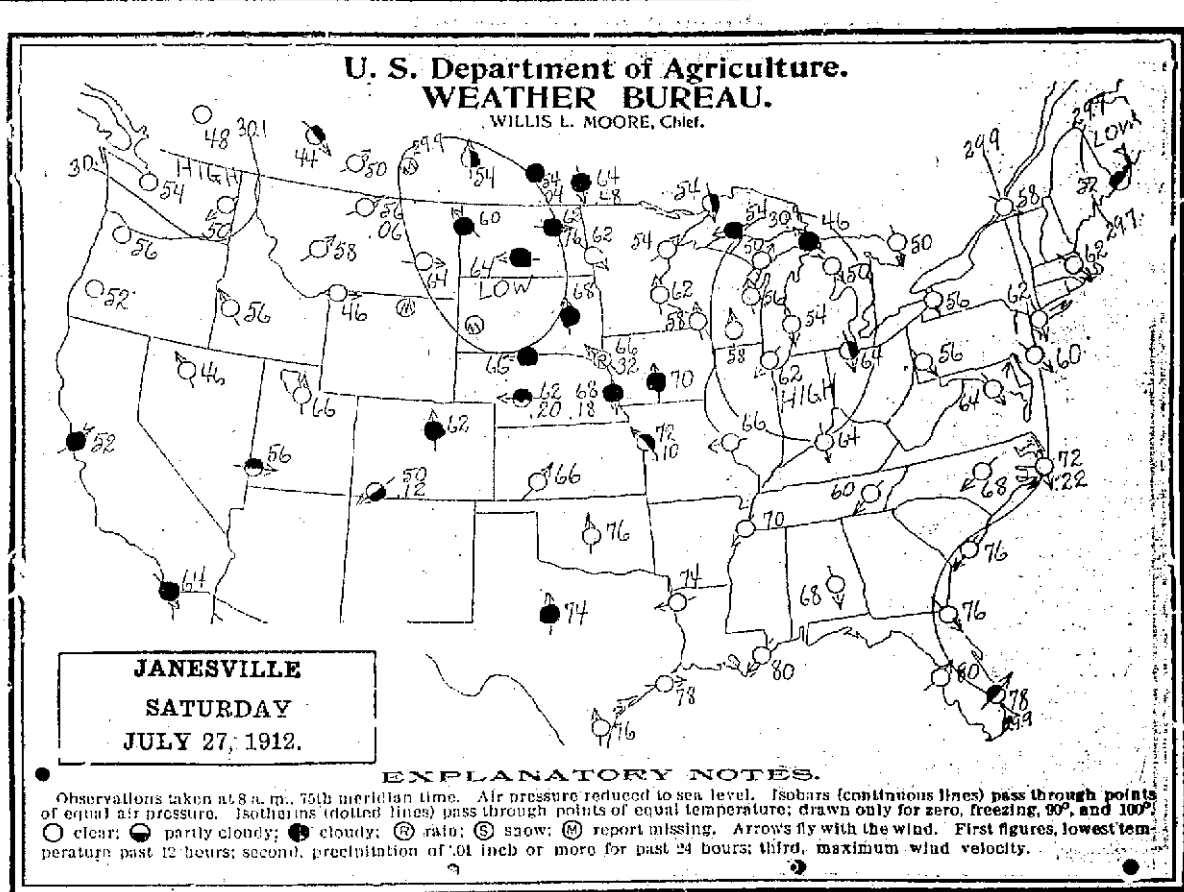

Janesville Daily Gazette, July 27, 1872.—The Beloit Burglars And Horse Thieves: More complete particulars regarding the burglary and horse stealing affair in Beloit on Wednesday night, noticed in Thursday's Gazette, enable us to make some corrections. The man arrested is a resident of Beloit, having been employed in a foundry there for some time past. His partner in the affair, who is still at large, came from Illinois to Beloit a few days ago and there made the acquaintance of the man under arrest. It is possible that the latter is innocent of any intent to commit a crime, as he states he was overtaken on the street and invited to ride to Janesville and that he knew nothing of the burglary or of the intent to go away with the horse and buggy; but he will be examined on a charge of horse theft, before Justice Taggart, at Beloit, on Friday next. Marshall Allen is still after the other man and thinks he has the scent.

Bowie Knife.—The original model sent by the renowned Colonel Bowie to the patent office at Washington, thirty or more years ago, for the purpose of obtaining letters patent upon the knife bearing his name, has come into our possession. It has the genuine ring of chivalry in its metal, and resembles a Johnny in the 'last ditch,' as much as anything. It was a "present" to us.

Overland

A Practical Comparison

This Forty-Five Horsepower Touring Car $1500; Equipped with Self-Starter Only $20 Extra

EVERY man likes to make every dollar he spends go as far as possible. He won't exchange it for seventy-five cents' worth of merchandise, from one man, if another offers him an even dollar's worth for a dollar. Ten cent soap is worth ten cents—not fifteen.

Any automobile manufacturer can talk to you in a general way about the unheard of value his car represents. But general statements do not count for very much. The are meaningless. They prove nothing.

While most of the advertising writers are trying to get your attention by flat, general, misleading statements in an effort to cover up the high prices on their cars, we want to talk to you on the same and practical comparative basis of facts and figures.

When we make the claim that our big forty-five horsepower five-passenger touring car at $1500 is the equal of any $2000 car on the market, we can prove this to be an actual fact. The better you are acquainted with automobile conditions, cars, prices, specifications, etc.; in fact, the more you will realize this to be true.

What do cars of this type usually sell for? You find them for $1700, $1750, $1800 and $2000 and some higher. But why should you pay the higher price? You will find these higher priced cars are no better—no larger—no more powerful—no more comfortable, than this car for $1500. So why pay more? You will find the motor no larger—the seating capacity no greater—the finish and appointments no finer. So, if you get no more, why on earth should you pay any more?

"How can you make a car of this size and power to sell for $1500 when other makers get $2000, and more, for cars that are almost identical?"—you ask.

It is possible for the very practical reason that we are the largest automobile producers in the business. We make 25,000 cars where the average standard maker produces but 5,000 and less. Having five times the manufacturing facilities, we are actually able to produce an automobile at from twenty to thirty per cent less cost. And this difference is found in our price to you.

So much for figures. Now, let's get down to the specifications, for the specifications represent the real intrinsic value of any automobile. This car has a powerful forty-five horsepower motor; the wheel base is one hundred and fifteen inches, the transmission is selective, three speeds and reverse, fitted with the F & S annular bearings, which are used on the most expensive cars in the world. The gear and crank casings are of pure aluminum. The control is in the center. The front axle is a drop forged I-section fitted with the finest Timken bearings. The rear axle is full floating, also fitted with Timkens. The frame is of pressed steel with a double drop. Tires are 34x4. It is equipped with a Bosch magneto. Body is of dark Brewster green, ivory striped. All of the bright parts are heavily nickel plated. Lamps are finished in black enamel and nickel. If you wish, we will equip this car with a self-starting system for only $20 additional. Our starter is the simplest and safest on the market. It starts the car ninety-nine times out of a hundred and a child can work it.

This brief synopsis of the specifications gives you the main facts covering this $1500 car. A car of any other make, with like specifications, cannot be found for less than $2000.

Right now the Overland is outselling any other similar car in the world. Would this be possible if we did not give more car, and a better car, for less money than any other maker in the industry?

By all means see this car before you buy. It surely should not take much to convince you that the purchase of a car for $1500 which generally sells for $2000 is good business. And we can prove by a point for point comparison that our $1500 car is the part for part equal of any $2000 car in America. It will give you the comfort, speed, power, seating capacity, service and wear.

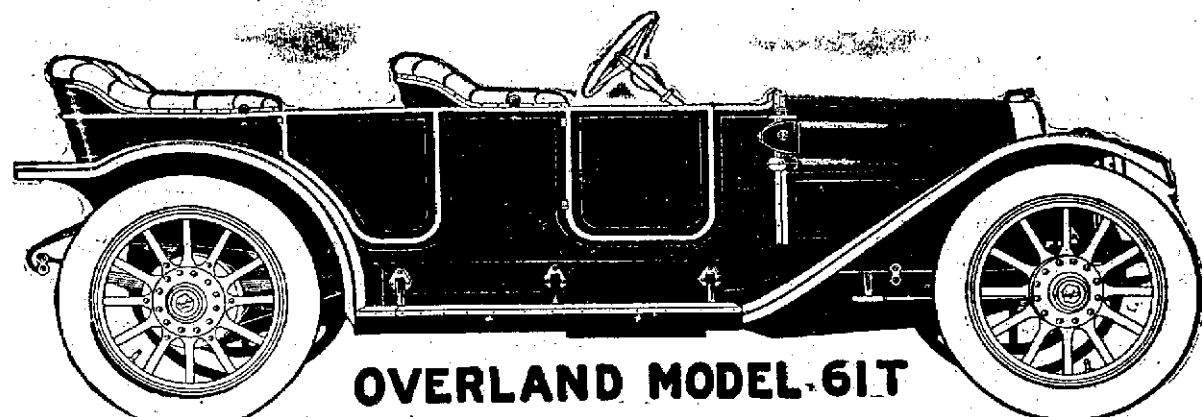

Write us for a big free catalogue, which gives you all the facts and specifications of not only this car, but the entire Overland line.

No better time of the year than right now to buy a car. We've sold more this month than any previous month.

GEORGE'S ROSE

BY CARL WALTER.

There was a sufficient sadness about the old house whose broad-paved gallery echoed only the limp steps of the negro Sam, there was a greater pathos in the garden, for here not even a slow footfall invaded the solitude.

Everything about the place breathed neglect—everything, from Sam's shuffling feet to the headless weathercock on the cupola.

But the roses, trailing unchecked over the crumbling walls, seemed to cry it, for in times past were they not the pride of the Rummel garden, bedded, pruned and sprayed, then the choicest blooms gathered each day and carried to the latticed door of the cottage over the way and presented, with Master George's compliments, to Miss Barbara?

But not so now. No, not since the day that Miss Barbara had bidden her mammy Chloe take Sam to take the roses back to his master, and to say that he had better send them to Nancy Pierce, since he seemed to care so much for her.

The roses went back to the big house but not to Miss Nancy. Sam set them in his master's room and tried to tell him gently. But when Sam picked up the bits of the crystal vase he sighed deeply. "Things will be different, I reckon."

Sam was right. Next morning the first post rider brought the news that Miss Nancy and Master George had gone to Beverly; were married.

So things were different, indeed. Although Mistress Rummel came to live at the big house and often walked in the garden, she never, after the first day, looked at the roses, for her husband had said that he detested roses, and would have Sam dig them up in the spring.

He said the last words in a low voice and when his bride was not looking set his heel on the bud which she had dropped, and looked hard toward the tight closed shutters of the deserted cottage across the way.

Sam did not dig up the roses. Master George told him to, but before the next spring Mistress Rummel went away. There was something about a confederate officer; then she died in Paris. Master Rummel went to sea and left Sam all alone in the big house.

One day in a June long after that, when the great fluff heads of the roses were drooping pensively under the glare of the sun a firm tread accompanied by a tap-tap sounded on the flag walk that led from the gate to the garden.

Sam heard them from the arbor house, where he had been dosing fitfully. The steps and the tapping paused now and then as if their owner were standing still here and there; then they started, went straight up to the door and stopped short.

It was a trembling hand that slowly raised a bud to a face framed in gray hair.

When the plumed petals touched the lips of Master George, somewhere a bird called to its mate and the summer wind sighed far away like an echoing sorrow.

The next day and for several days after a great gray veil hung over the sun so that Master George's visits to the garden became one prolonged communion. He had Sam bring a settee from the gallery and one day he picked a beautiful winsome bud and laid it on his knee beside the unopened paper, while he looked and had trod. Word of Miss Barbara's triumphs and adulations had reached the garden, but by that time its master was upon the high seas and the remnant of town folk only shook its head sagely. When in after years it was looked—not at the red cottage, with its fast-closed shutters. From the very first he had turned his defiant back to the lonely house.

The stillness about the place haunted him. Miss Barbara had gone long ago, on the night after his return from Beverly, and now the Virginia creeper climbed the basement as if shielding its mistress' home from the gazing world, while the shrub and berry vine tangled caringly over the paths which she remained that she had a world of suitors at her feet, but that none was accepted, its aging head nodded significantly.

June melted into autumn, and the mist continued to lift and lower over the blazing sun and Master George continued to sit in the garden while the roses withered and smiled companionably.

Sam had captured the bristly branches and culled the ghostly stalks that had long threatened the tender shoots, and now each flower seemed to bloom for the master's praise and touch, each seemed to rival the other in recalling a time long gone.

Into that long-gone time Master George had entered, all unwitting. It was the roses—they had brought lights of tenderness back into his eyes; helped him to forget the broken vase; the mad ride to Beverly and the bitter aftermath.

Now in their midst he was strolling with Barbara. These very paths echoed her songs; Barbara in white muslins, buoyant and happy; Barbara, with a rose in her hair.

One morning Master George tarried long beside the roses. His face was drawn and ashen, for when he had reached for a tempting bud near the wall his eye caught the white of a curtain that fluttered out of the casement of the red cottage.

Barbara's cottage? He looked intently, misbelievingly the wondering eyes. Yet there beside the open window sat Mammy Chloe, red-coated and sad.

Master George opened his book, but that could not hide the stooping figure of the old colored woman; he started to read aloud, but that could not drown the crooning of her mournful song.

Then the eyes in the garden suddenly dimmed and Master George leaned hard upon his cane as he went toward home.

In his room he sought from the folds of his wallet a rose long withered. Sam found him in the twilight with his head crushed in his hand.

He went early to the garden next morning, but when he reached the settee Mammy Chloe was gone from her place by the window; the shutters were closed and the cottage had resumed its former aspect of pathetic silence.

He walked the path, stopping now and then to peer through the hedge. "It is early," he argued, "she is resting; she has come a long way." But the sun said noon and after and still the blinds were drawn.

Twilight came, and with it a feeble light streaked through the slanting bars. Master George still sat in the garden. A book lay unopened beside him and his head was low bent.

"Barbara!" his lips moved. Could it be that Mammy Chloe had returned to the cottage—alone?

Young men and girls strolled past the iron gate in the leafy distance. He could hear snatches of their gay chatter, and now and then some plaintive chords on a guitar down the street.

The gate hump lifted, dropped. Someone was treading the long-disused path. He did not heed nor hear, for back through a vista of exile, life again stretched in unending years—years weighed with the wrong-doing of that fitful night—years now bitter, now lonely.

Tears lay in his eyes as he watched the flickering candle light in the cottage window, and thought of the garden days just ended. Days so full of thought—days wherein he had grown to know that it was love that had led him home—home to wait for Barbara—but now! O, God! Had she gone on to that land of eternal roses? His heart stilled in answer.

Not till the ambling figure stopped near the rosebed did he know. He started, trembling with uncertainty, then with outstretched hands rushed to meet her. "Tell me—has Barbara—? Where is she?" he could say no more.

The red-coated head bowed low and in the darkness she pointed in mute appeal to the cottage window.

"She's there, Mrs. George, most sick, an' wearily, her heart out for roses, jes' roses."

Silent But Strenuous. Pyker—That chap you were talking to on the corner looks like a prize fighter.

Hyker—Yes, that's a fact. He's my silent partner.

Pyker—Does he foot the bills?

Hyker—No; he foots the bill collectors.

He Gave It. "Who can give a sentence using the word pendulum?" asked the teacher.

Little Rachel's hand shot up. The teacher nodded encouragingly. "Lightning was invented by Benjamin Franklin."

The Eternal Question. Willie—Pa!

Pa—Yes.

Willie—Teacher says we're here to help others.

Pa—Of course we are.

Willie—Well, what are the others here for?

A Misapprehension. Off I sit with both eyes blinking.

And my thoughts are quite sublime.

That is I seem to think I'm thinking.

When I'm merely killing time.

Pastor's Merited Rebuke. When Samuel S. Colver was preaching in an old log schoolhouse in Johnson county, Missouri, in 1852, his congregation was quite small. One Sunday all were sitting at the desks forward near the pulpit.

The sermon was monotonous and the old log seats had no backs. Observing the sleepy, downcast look of the congregation, the minister woke them up by shouting: "Arouse, heaven is not under the floor!"

Divided Nest. A North Westmorland (England) farmer recently came across a very unusual sight. In the course of his rounds through his fields he found a nest with 25 eggs in it. The large number was not the only marvel, for on examining the eggs, he found that 15 of them belonged to a pheasant, and the remaining ten to a partridge. The pheasant, as the stronger bird, was the probable intruder.

WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE. (CONTRIBUTED)

In speaking of the New York parade of the Equal Suffragists, where 20,000 people marched in demonstration of their belief, the New York Press said:

"New York was startled into thinking yesterday when 20,000 women, earnest, unsmiling and silent marched for three miles along Fifth avenue to prove the intensity of their purpose to gain votes for women. It was a demonstration that apparently stirred the minds of the beholders as probably no other pageant seen in the city streets has done. Manhattan was brought for the first time to a realization of the strength of the Suffrage movement, its universality and its grip on the minds of its adherents."

Of the same occasion the New York Evening Post has to say:

"For those who see in the extension of democracy to woman a menace to the nation we have genuine sympathy. Their cousin of alarm must be sounded not after the annual Suffrage parade, but daily, and even then it will be destined to fall on a steadily growing number of unheeding ears. For the effect of such a superb demonstration of quiet power and reserve force as those paraders and their largely increased numbers of male sympathizers made on Saturday cannot be contracted by a single editorial call to arms."

May Sinclair in answering Sir Alworth Wright's Hypothesis that hysteria is the foundation of the Suffrage movement, says in a recent pamphlet:

"For at the bottom of it, (referring to the suffrage movement) are certain hard sociological and economic facts, and these are the facts, the very vital facts—that Sir Alworth Wright suppresses."

There are more women than men in this country and somehow these women have to be maintained. It is on the whole, better for society that they should maintain themselves than that they should be ignobly or dishonestly dependent. Women are driven into the labor market by the irresistible pressure of economic forces.

Again, however much man may dislike to have women working side by side with him, he has no objection whatever to her working under him so long as her work is cheap. What he lives in fear of is that at any moment her work may become dear. And it is in the economical field where woman's competition is now so formidable that equal rights for all, by which men will be first to benefit.

Women will no longer be under sold in their own market, and woman's labor will be withdrawn from all industries wherein she is no longer able to compete. There will be no more false commercial values, real efficiency will be the test."

From Topeka, Kansas, comes word of the work accomplished in that

The Home Beautiful

DESIGN NO. 59

We have here an elegant example of the 1½ story which has never lost its popularity. It secures for the home owner the arrangements of the first floor he may desire and still have abundance of room on the second floor at a great saving in price while giving a more pleasing exterior, as not being so high does not have that bean pole appearance possessed by a narrow two-story house. This one has 14 feet studding for the outer walls. This puts the matter to the home builder in practically this form, 1st, the desired arrangement on first floor, 2nd, sufficient rooms on second floor, and 3rd, a much handsomer building on the outside, and last, but not least, a saving in cost of practically $300.00.

The attempt here has been to reduce the cost to a minimum by eliminating all built in furniture, as it will be seen all that is found here being the cupboard in the pantry and the "medicine cabinet" in the bath room. The convenient arrangement of rooms could not be surpassed at double the cost.

We have here the "reception hall" with its large open stairway, a cased opening into the "large living room," which is connected with the "dining room" by sliding doors. From here we have a double acting door to the kitchen. Off the kitchen is the pantry containing the sink and cupboard. On the second floor are three large chambers and bath room all opening off the hall. Each of these rooms have a large closet and an additional one is in the hall. This house finished first-class throughout in Yellow Pine which includes all plumbing, heating, lighting, would cost approximately $2500.00. One desiring finer finish could add as desired oak floor and finish to bring the cost to $2900. Width 29 feet, length 30 feet. Clip this page and save it.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

TO quarrel or to air one's family disagreements in front of outsiders is painfully bad taste.

To appeal to these outsiders to take sides by expressing their opinion on the points of contention is worse than bad taste. It is discourtesy; it is unkindness; it is a flagrant violation of the golden rule. For everyone knows how embarrassing it is to be appealed to in this way. To have to be a witness to a family disagreement is bad enough. It makes one feel so awkward and self-conscious, so painfully in the way and so wishful of an Aladdin's carpet on which to whisk one's self to the farthest corner of the earth. But to be appealed to to take sides—that is the last straw.

A friend tells me that she actually ceased to visit at one home because the husband and wife were continually disagreeing and continually embarrassing her by urging her to express her opinion.

"I suppose they are fond of each other," she said, "but they never agree on anything and they never have the slightest hesitancy about arguing in front of me. I wouldn't mind that so much, but they always insist on my saying what I think, and then the one I disagree with gets cross with me. I try to be polite and not take sides, but you know sitting on the fence all day is kind of hard work. One time it is whether to do the living-room over in brown or green and the next it was an argument on woman's suffrage and the next it was whether to send Donald to public or private school. That was the last time I was there. I don't believe in private schools and I was foolish enough to say so. Laura does, and that made her cross with me, and altogether I just made up my mind that I'd never go there again—at least unless I heard they had reformed."

Myself, I shall never forget a day I spent with a quarrelsome family. Though I was invited for the day, I should certainly have made some excuse to escape sooner, had it not been that their home was on an island and the only communication with the mainland was a small steamer which touched at the island once a day. I went on the morning trip and couldn't get away until night. I made up my mind that I'd never go island visiting again. There were two daughters and their mother in the family, and as each one was ready to quarrel with either of the others on practically any subject, they managed to keep some embroilment on hand almost every minute. Of course I was strenuously urged to join in the fun by expressing my opinion on the disputed points. I tried to remain neutral, but, as my friend says, balancing on the fence all day is not the most comfortable thing in the world.

The fine art of being good to visit is founded on more than an ability to house your guest comfortably, feed him well and entertain him much. It also requires the courtesy and breeding not to air one's family disagreements in his presence and never, on any account, to try to make him join in them.

A WOMAN'S OBSERVATIONS

Edna K. Woolley

we enjoyed having little streaks of clean show down a dirty face.

And there were, besides, hours when it seemed as though the sky had fallen on everything that was our happiness, when we managed not to cry.

Those little griefs, funny, perhaps, to the grown-ups, were just as real, just as deep, as anything that has come to us later. And our childhood was no more free from bother than our older, wiser years.

I believe it would mean considerably less feeling of injustice and rebellion, and lead to considerably more of a feeling of understanding between generations, if the grown-ups would remember this.

After all, our whole lives probably are trivial, so far as concerns our daily joys and griefs, the occasions even of our greatest happiness and sorrows.

And don't believe we should enjoy feeling that when we whispered our troubles to some Greater Power, we were being dismissed with a pat on the head, a superior smile, and the words that we know nothing of real trouble; that such a thing had never yet entered our lives.

If a thing is so real to us that it darkens the day and makes the day past seem fruitless and the day ahead hopeless and futile, I believe we have a right to call it real trouble—to us—regardless of our age or the way it measures up in the eyes of someone else, regardless even of how its effect will last. Don't you?

Heart and Home Problems

MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson—Some of my friends have been trying to convert me to a vegetarian diet. They say I will be healthier and all around better looking for it.

I have a rather sallow complexion. Do you think a vegetable diet would help it?

ANNA.

Too much meat is not good for anybody. Meat once a day is enough for a health diet.

Most people do not eat enough vegetables. While I do not think that most of us could be quite happy on a strictly vegetarian diet, as the human being is omnivorous, it is true that most people would be better off physically if they would eat less meat and more vegetables and fruits.

To improve your complexion, eat all the fresh fruits and vegetables possible; exercise in the open air; drink plenty of milk or buttermilk.

With your stomach in good condition and your lungs full of fresh air, you will soon see a change for the better in your general appearance.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—My feet always begin to burn and head ache in hot weather. What can I do for them?

H. L.

Bathe them in lukewarm salt water every night before retiring.

Wear soft thin stockings—preferably white or light colored. Change your shoes two or three times a day if take for granted that you wear

However, be a little indifferent about accepting another invitation. If he persists and appears to be very much in earnest about it, it might be permissible to give him another trial. It all depends upon your knowledge of his general character. If you have any good reason to believe that he is not to be trusted, fight shy of him altogether.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—I have called several times on a very sweet girl. She is so sweet that the other night I kissed her and now I am afraid I have offended her. I called again and she was not at home and when I saw her on the street she was very cool to me. Please tell me what to do.

CHARLEY D.

Write her a little note, apologizing for your act. Tell her you will not repeat the offense and beg her to forgive you and permit you to call upon her as you are very desirous of having her be your good friend. If she is a reasonable girl, she will be nice about it and forget the transgression. But don't try it again, unless you mean to ask her to marry you.

The Kitchen Cabinet

WHAT TO DO WITH LEFT-OVERS.

"Every day is a fresh beginning" with left-overs. They are like housework, "powerful constant." It is indeed surprising what good and appetizing dishes may be prepared from the combination of two or more foods. To the frugal and saving cook, "all is fish that comes to her net." A cupful of cooked spinach left from dinner may be mixed with mashed potato, egg and seasonings and sautéed in bacon fat, making a nice little luncheon or breakfast dish.

An escalloped dish of rice and asparagus left-overs is most appetizing. Put a layer of cooked rice in a baking dish, pour over asparagus which has been served with white sauce, another layer of rice and asparagus and finish with crumbs well buttered. Bake until thoroughly hot. If there is not enough of the asparagus, add a hard cooked egg or two to the combination.

For a good dessert in an emergency, try using this: Butter a few slices of bread, lay them in a baking dish and pour over cooked plump, or fresh is better; sprinkle with sugar, put on another layer of buttered bread, cover with the plump and bake. This dessert may be covered with a meringue or not as one likes.

Mutton Ragout—Beat currant jelly until smooth, measure three tablespoonsful in a hot saucepan, add a teaspoonful of lemon juice and two tablespoonsful of butter. When the butter is melted, reheat thin slices of cold boiled mutton in sauce. Season with salt and paprika.

Mixed Lamb—Chop remnants of cold roast lamb; there should be a cupful. Put two tablespoonsful of butter in a hot saucepan, and when melted add the lamb, some salt, pepper and celery salt, and dredge thoroughly with flour; then add enough stock or water to moisten. Serve hot on small slices of buttered toast.

Dried beef chopped in small pieces and added to a rich white sauce makes a fine accompaniment to baked potatoes for a luncheon or supper dish.

DIET AND HEALTH HINTS

By DR. T. J. ALLEN

WEAK EYES AND DIET.

"If a person has weak eyes, the lids becoming badly inflamed, is there a diet that will relieve the trouble?" Diet is fundamental in health and errors in diet often bring about abnormal conditions which can be corrected by correcting the diet; but diet is not the only factor in health. The hereditary constitution of the organism is a fundamental factor, which must be considered in all treatment. Exercise and elimination, good water and fresh air and proper mental conditions are also important. There is always a tendency to restore the normal condition of health, when obstructions are removed and the conditions supplied that are favorable to the establishment of the normal condition. Abnormal habits of function, of cell growth, are established by abnormal conditions of nutrition and these often tend to persist, most obstinately in the case of malignant disease, but the adoption of a simple diet provides one of the most important conditions favorable to the restoration of health. Without further knowledge of the case, I can only suggest a simplification of the diet along the lines suggested in preceding hints.

MARY ELLEN'S WAY

She Convinces Mr. Mary Ellen of the Desirability of Moving Into a More Fashionable Neighborhood

LET'S invite the Wellingtons to dinner," suggested Mary Ellen one evening.

"H'm," said Mr. Mary Ellen. "What for?"

"They had us out there to dinner some time ago, and we ought to return it. Don't you think so?"

"Yes, I suppose so," admitted Mr. Mary Ellen. "But they put on so overbearing much style, maybe they wouldn't enjoy our plain way of living."

"I guess what's good enough for us is good enough for them," Mary Ellen said spiritedly. "We live simply. But you say yourself you like this place because it is unpretentious, and you can go in for solid comfort without having to waste time or money for non-essentials. Maybe it would be a good thing to let them see just how much is to be got out of life, without show."

"Well, go ahead," said Mr. Mary Ellen.

So the Wellingtons came to dinner. After dinner Mary Ellen suggested they take a walk. "We don't have any millionaire palaces to show you," she said brightly, as they started, "but we do have rather a pretty walk through the woods."

"The charms of nature, eh?" responded Mr. Wellington. "You certainly do have nature, as natural, so far as your roads are concerned," he continued, as he tried to pick out a path that wasn't either ruts or dust. "How do you endure roads like these in this era of good road-making?"

"They are rather bad," assented Mr. Mary Ellen. "I've been at the road commissioners, but nothing is ever done."

"They've got to keep them in repair out our way," said Wellington. "Our roads are smooth as a board and oiled constantly."

"I should think the dust would drive you distracted," said Mrs. Wellington, holding her skirts very high and scornfully eyeing the road.

"Yes, it is annoying," admitted Mary Ellen, "but I make the best of it."

"There seems to be a lot of children in this neighborhood," said Mrs. Wellington, gazing at a rather disreputable horde playing in front of one of the houses.

"Several undesirable families have moved in lately. Mr. Mary Ellen is quite annoyed at the change that is coming over the neighborhood," explained Mary Ellen.

"Yes," said Mr. Mary Ellen; "it isn't what it was when we first came here."

"Great heavens!" exclaimed Mr. Wellington. "What an odor. Do you have surface drainage? Why, man, you'll have typhoid."

"I have been thinking of complaining to the State Board of Health," said Mr. Mary Ellen. "Since it has been building up around here this drainage question is getting to be quite a serious matter."

By this time they had picked their way along a rather marshy path through the woods and were returning to the house. As they sat down on the porch a swarm of mosquitoes gleefully made for them, and some neighbor's children began to cry loudly.

"I think we must be going," said Mrs. Wellington, hastily rising.

"Oh, not so early," expostulated Mary Ellen.

"Yes, we must. One of our neighbors is giving a bridge and we promised to be there. We have had a lovely time. You must find it very restful here."

"Oh, yes," said Mary Ellen with a slight sigh. "There's never any thing doing here."

After they had gone Mr. Mary Ellen sat quiet for a long time. At last he said: "This place isn't quite all it might be, is it?"

"No," replied Mary Ellen a trifle reluctantly. "It could be improved. Style that is nothing but style isn't, of course, worth an intelligent person's consideration, just as you say. But when a place such as the Wellingtons live in means good roads, and underground sewage, and pleasant associates, it's a different proposition, don't you think so?"

"Yes, I do. I believe I'll look up property out there."

"I would," said Mary Ellen. "It's more the kind of place that you with your business associations, ought to live in."

YOUNG WIFE SAVED FROM HOSPITAL

Tells How Sick She Was And What Saved Her From An Operation.

Upper Sandusky, Ohio.—"Three years ago I was married and went to housekeeping. I was not feeling well and could hardly drag myself along. I had such tired feelings, my sides ached, I had bladder trouble awfully bad, and I could not eat or sleep. I had headaches, too, and became almost a nervous wreck. My doctor told me to go to a hospital. I did not like that idea very well, so, when I saw your advertisement in a paper, I wrote to you for advice, and have done as you told me. I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, and now I have my health.

"If sick and ailing women would only know enough to take your medicine, they would get relief."—Mrs. BENJ. H. STANSBURY, Route 6, Box 18, Upper Sandusky, Ohio.

If you have mysterious pains, irregularity, backache, extreme nervousness, inflammation, ulceration or displacement, don't wait too long, but try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound now.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and such unquestionable testimony as the above proves the value of this famous remedy and should give every one confidence.

plate and garnish with cress or heart leaves of lettuce. Decorate with mayonnaise pushed through a pastry tube or a cornet. It will need to be a stiff dressing and, of course, like the platter and the ingredients, must be very cold. Now rub a hard boiled egg through a ricer or a coarse sieve and sprinkle over the finished salad.

A celery entree published in the Chef's Reminder and frequently served in the large hostilities throughout the country is made with four heads of celery cut in short lengths, and boiled tender. Rub this through a vegetable press to remove the fiber, and add a cup of grated ham, a cup of fine bread crumbs and a little butter, pepper and salt. Steam the mixture until it thickens and serve it in patty cases, while very hot. Guaranteed to please!

Celery with bacon is another new recipe that will soon be a favorite. Cut celery heads that are not too large, in four-inch lengths; blanch for five minutes in boiling salted water. Drain and lay in a baking dish that will do to serve them in and almost cover with rich unskimmed broth, or thin white sauce.

Now cover with thin slices of finely flavored bacon cut in narrow strips across the grain and place in a hot oven until the bacon is crisp and brown.

With this delectable dish serve crusty finger rolls or small hot, twin baking powder biscuits.

Celery puree is an appropriate garnish to use with lamb or mutton. It is made in the way as creamed celery, the coarse stalks that are not suitable to serve as a relish may be used for this. Cut the stalks in short pieces and let them boil in salted water until quite tender. Pour off this water and put the celery in a sauce pan with two cups of stock, some pepper and salt and a pinch of sugar, and continue cooking until the celery is in shreds; rub this through a fine sieve and add a cup of cream and a tablespoon of flour blended with a tablespoon of butter. Stir until quite smooth and thick. Pour it around the entrees of veal or chicken or lamb.

Celery may be kept crisp and fresh for a week or longer by rolling it in wet brown paper and then in a dry paper or towel and putting it on the floor of the cellar where it is cool and dark.

AGRICULTURAL WORK IN RURAL SCHOOLS; TEACHERS' REPORTS

Efforts to Further Study of Agricultural in Country Schools Meet With Success.

It has been the plan of Principal Lowth of the county training school to encourage in every way possible the teaching of agriculture in the district schools. Superintendent Antisdal has also co-operated in this matter and various methods have been instituted to further this practical side of education in the country.

As part of the plan Principal Lowth sent carefully selected seed packages to ten or more rural school teachers in the county whom he thought would take a special interest in the work and requested them to plant a garden on the school grounds if possible. He suggested means of interesting the pupils and indicated how such a garden plot might be a laboratory for the agricultural studies which are carried on more or less thoroughly in all the schools of the county.

Most of the teachers took hold of the suggestions with enthusiasm and with resulting success. Undoubtedly there will be a larger number who will plant gardens next spring following recommendations which were made at the institute and summer sessions.

All of the teachers who had gardens this spring were requested to make reports to Mr. Lowth. Three of these reports are given below.

Miss Eva Townsend of district No. 5 town of Magnolia, writes as follows:

Last spring I received some garden seeds from Mr. Lowth, principal of the Rock County Training School; also a letter suggesting that we have a school garden. Thinking that this would be very helpful to my agricultural class, I talked with the children about it. All seemed very enthusiastic over it and so we began our plans at once. We selected as our garden a sunny slope where wood had been piled high during the winter. The older boys brought the needed tools and soon had the soil ready for the seed. We planted radishes, lettuce, beans, beets, and a number of varieties of flowers. As the weather favored us, the seeds soon came up and the weeds too; but willing hands kept at work as we were determined that our garden should be a success. This was realized, for on the last day the children took pride in serving fresh vegetables with our lunch.

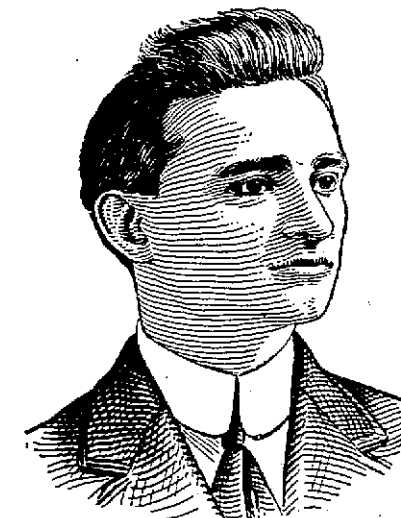

We all enjoyed the work very much and considered the time well spent. We were able to put into actual practice what we had learned. I would recommend that every rural teacher

TESTIMONIAL.

Dear Doctor: Some months ago I began taking treatment of you for nerve and liver trouble. Before I began taking your treatment I was so weak and nervous that I was hardly able to do my work. You have restored my nerves and liver to good health again. I shall most cheerfully recommend your treatment to all friends suffering from a similar trouble. Gratefully yours, determine for herself the value of a school garden by trying it.

Miss Hazel Emerson, district No. 12, town of Lima, made the following report:

I have been asked by the principal of the training school to tell about the garden planted at my school this spring.

After receiving some seeds from Principal Lowth, which he said were to be planted in a garden on my school grounds, I asked my little boys to go to one of the houses not far from the school and borrow a spade and a rake. I showed them where I wanted the garden and how to spade up the dirt. When one little boy would get tired, another would work for a while. Finally the girls became interested and spaded up the dirt too. After we had spaded the ground, I showed them how to rake it until there were no large lumps. Then with the help of the children we marked out rows in our garden with a stick. In one row we planted some radishes. Then we decided to divide the garden into plots, having corn in one end, and the flowers in the other. In the middle we planted peas and set out violets, cotton and iris plants. The girls cared for this garden; the little boys had a miniature garden field, which they planted and cared for themselves. The pupils furnished some seeds and greatly enjoyed watching them grow.

After the plants came up, the children would go out every morning to see if they had grown larger. After every rain we loosened the dirt and pulled out the weeds, which grew faster than the plants did.

I believe that this work is helpful to both the teacher and the child. The spirit of co-operation is developed in working in the garden together. There is also a school pride and loyalty which is well worth cultivating.

Aside from the character training, the practical hand training is not to be lost sight of. Our boys and girls need the education of doing this kind of work.

Miss Clara McWilliam, joint district No. 1, La Prairie and Bradford, tells of her experience with a school garden below:

Mr. Lowth, principal of the Rock County Training School, requested me to write this article on "Our School Garden," telling of the interest shown by the pupils in this work.

Early last spring I received a package of seeds, which were sent me from the training school to be used in starting a garden. I talked with the pupils about starting this garden. They were all willing and anxious to do this. By taking turns at the work, the ground was soon ready for the seeds. This plot was very small, and as we had only planted a few of the seeds, another place was selected in which they wished to plant just flower seeds. These gardens were anxiously watched by the pupils to see who would be the first to discover a leaf above the ground. As soon as they were up we worked together to keep out the weeds. At the children's own suggestion they planned to take care of the garden during the summer. They are especially anxious to have flowers from the garden.

This work is very beneficial to the pupils and teacher. By co-operation in work more interest is taken and better results obtained. They not only learn to work together but also to take pride in doing well. This garden idea is one of the means of the country school education and it is a distinct step in the direction of good citizenship.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES.

HABIT.

(By Howard L. Rann.)

HABIT is an acquired luxury which consists in driving the human will with the bridge off.

Some habits are able to get over the ground faster than others, and have to be curbed by the grand jury four times a year at heavy expense to the truculent taxpayer.

The most difficult habit to acquire is the habit of thinking in words of five syllables without falling into a litany, vail and receding into the market with unbalanced verbiage. Habit is something which seizes a man in an unguarded moment, when ginger ale would do just as well, ties him in an upright position to the nearest bar and causes him to inhale enough whiskey slings to float a whaleback at low tide.

One of the best habits now made is that which prevents people from digging into other folks' business without first being invited to draw cards. This habit is not as common as chewing gum at the theater in a laudacious and uninterrupted manner, but it wears better with the general public.

Whenever a habit becomes so familiar that it sends a man to work with a pair of eyes looking like two burnt holes in a rag carpet, it is time to taper off on seven-up or Five Hundred.

Habit is a treacherous article to tamper with, as it will vary a man's eyesight until he can't see the difference between thirty ten-cent cigars a day and smoking in moderation.

Some people try to disguise habit by chewing coffee beans, while others go about in company with the embittered young onion. If there is any habit which onions will not kill, it deserves to live to a ripe old age.

The most cohesive habits are those which have to be coaxed, coaxed, sub-soiled, discharrowed, and irrigated before they become enthusiastic over their surroundings and take out a life lease. Among these is the olive habit, which never yields until it has been swallowed several times in a defiant and intrepid manner.

MUNICIPAL MARKET HELPED TO REDUCE HIGH LIVING COST

Public Market of Sioux City Proved of Substantial Benefit to Consumer—Dealers Not Harmed.

Substantial relief from the high cost of living as the result of establishing a city market is reported by John Kelley, a member of the Commercial Club of Sioux City, Iowa. In a recent conversation with a Duluth citizen he said:

"We established a market in Sioux City last year where the farmers could exhibit his wares and where the consumer and producer of produce could meet. We had our troubles in getting the market established. There was much honest skepticism about the feasibility of the project, also there were many knacks from others not so honest. Some thought the farmers would not sustain such a market if it was established others thought the people would not patronize it anyway; others thought it would hurt the home merchants' trade and others who the commission men and merchants would go and buy up all the produce on the market every day and then resell it at their own prices.

"Well, we got the market first, and all these other things took care of themselves. We found the farmers were glad to sustain the market, and this year there is being twice or three times the produce brought to Sioux City than there was last. We found the people would and did patronize it. We also found there were some merchants and commission men who would forestall the enterprise but we passed an ordinance that fixed that we fixed it so no merchant or commission man could buy an ounce of stuff before 9 a. m. That gave the consumers who wanted to buy direct two hours—from 7 till 9—to buy what they wanted, and after that the dealer could take what was left. I am informed by dealers that the market has not interfered with their business in the least.

"We have three market days a week, and on these days it's a sight to see the people going and coming with empty and filled baskets. It is saving people, and to the very ones who suffer most from it, and it is enabling the farmers to get a better price for their stuff, and have it sold by 9 o'clock and ready to start for home, whereas they used to take most of the day to peddle it.

"Not only that, but it is keeping money at home that was formerly sent to Kansas City and other places by our commission men for produce. Instead of buying produce in outside markets as before, our commission men are now shipping out produce which is raised by the farmers around the city."

CAUTIONS NEWER CITIES ON IMPORTANCE OF PLAN.

Tacoma Tribune—The newer cities should earn a valuable lesson from some of the older communities that are endeavoring to recognize the value of city planning and are going to enormous expense to secure properly for city beautification that could have been secured originally almost without cost. That in the future the element of reason and the ideal of beauty are to count for more than in the past is a safe statement and carries with it no excessive disparagement of the past. It ever has been so with great centers of population, conscious reconstruction making good the defects of earlier generations, and doing it often with wealth that the pioneers cared more for than they did for anything else. New York, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Chicago, and Boston are among the older and larger cities that are now spending millions of money for property for playgrounds, parks, boulevards and civic centers. Their experience should encourage the efforts of public-spirited citizens of Tacoma and other newer cities toward securing grounds for those valuable assets before the advance in prices of real estate makes their acquisitions almost impossible.

DESIGNS AN ATTRACTIVE RECEPTACLE FOR GARBAGE.

Dr. Frank Smith, Monona, avenue and East Dolly street, has brought to Madison the first modern, up-to-date sanitary, floral garbage receptacle, which not only answers all of the purposes of the old-fashioned and less sanitary receptacle, but actually adds to the beauty of a yard. Dr. Smith always interested in a brighter and cleaner Madison, believes the new style cabinet solves the garbage question in cities.

The receptacle proper is on the inside of the cabinet painted white. On the top of the cabinet is a square box large enough in which to plant a small garden of flowers. At the base are a number of geraniums in flower pots. Instead of becoming a thing of obnoxious odors, the cabinet is neat, and the fragrance of the flowers more than offsets the odors of the contents of the cabinet.

Dr. Smith has placed the cabinet, which has a door that can be securely fastened, near the veranda at the rear of his home. The cabinet is a sleek, attractive and beautiful. Few who have passed comment on it realize its real purposes.—Madison Journal.

NOT PLEASED WITH TRIAL OF OIL ON BRICK STREETS.

Just how satisfactory will pan out the experiment of putting oil on the brick pavement on Main street is a matter about which there at present is a good deal of speculation, while for some it is the occasion of some downright "cussing." The oiled side of the pavement certainly presents the appearance of a nasty mess, and the feeling of those into whose business places is tracked the sticky, oily stuff can better be imagined than described. People will cross the street between the intersections, and it is impossible to do so without carrying away some of the oil. On earth roads or macadam pavements, which are left undisturbed for a few days after being oiled, the oil seems to become pretty well absorbed and loses its most objectionable features.

SCHOOL SOCIAL CENTERS ISSUE IN BOARD ELECTION.

The question of allowing the city schools to be used for social centers, for supervised public dances, amateur dramatics and neighborhood dramatics was a leading issue in the last school board election in Duluth. Over 29,000 votes were cast, the record for school board elections in that city, and the progressive ticket was voted into office.

To the women of the city is given the credit for the determined stand for social center work as represented in the two platforms and for the overwhelming majority recorded as favoring a progressive board inclined to keep abreast of the times in educational and social matters, and they cast by far the majority of the ballots. Hundreds of women who had never voted in the past made the trip to the voting places and endorsed the idea of a wider scope of influence for the school.

MADISON COUNCIL PASSES THEATRE LICENSE MEASURE.

The Madison council has passed the Dowling ordinance providing for the licensing of theatres, by a vote of 14 to 6. The ordinance provides for the licensing to be done on the following scale:

Moving picture houses charging not more than five cents admission, $50 a year; moving picture houses charging more than five cents, $100; vaudeville and regularly established theatres, $150 a year.

The license fee on the last named was reduced to $150 from $250 as was first suggested.

The license is to expire June 30 of each year and the penalty for the violation of the ordinance is a fine of not less than $5 or more than $100 for each offense.

ROCHESTER WILL VOTE ON INCORPORATION SOON.

Rochester, Wis.—Notices have been posted naming Tuesday, August 20, as the day on which the citizens within the prescribed limits of the proposed village of Rochester shall vote on the question of incorporation. It is expected that the question will be decided in the affirmative by a good substantial majority and that the work of improvements now started will be continued.

NORTH DAKOTA CITY TO HAVE PUBLIC PLAYGROUNDS.

Carrington, N. D.—At a mass meeting of the citizens of Carrington, it was decided to become actively engaged in the playground movement, and a commission was formed for the purpose of establishing playgrounds in this city. The plan will not be put into operation till next year.

The Carrington Commercial club and the Women's Civic league are back of the proposition. The great success achieved in several of the medium sized cities of the state has been responsible for the local action.

Speedometer For Police.

The Watertown Common Council has ordered a speedometer purchased for the chief of police to be used in the police department in the detection and apprehension of violators of the speed laws; said speedometer to be in the charge and keeping of the chief of police and to cost not more than $20.

To Prevent Street Repairs.

Alderman Price of the Madison council introduced an ordinance aimed to prohibit the repair of automobiles in front of garages about the city and providing that all work must be done off the street, unless an accident occurs more than 600 feet from the garage. It was referred to the street committee.

Want Municipal Light.

The hamlet of Denmark near Manitowish has started an agitation for a municipal electric light plant. It has also made application to the circuit court for permission to incorporate as a village.

Purchase Filter Site. The city of Appleton has purchased a site for the proposed filtering plant from the Fox River Paper Company for $6,000.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all the diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. The Three Guardsmen

... By ...
ALEXANDRE DUMAS

"King's musketeers," said Athos. "Advance and render me an account of what you are doing here at this time of night."

"Monsieur le Cardinal!" cried the stumped musketeers, recognizing the voice.

"Your name?" cried the cardinal for the third time.

"Athos," said the musketeer.

"These three musketeers shall follow us," said the cardinal in an under voice to his attendants. "I am not willing it should be known I have left the camp, and by following us we shall be certain they will tell nobody."

"We are gentlemen, monseigneur," said Athos. "Require our parole and give yourself no uneasiness. We can keep a secret."

"You have a quick ear, M. Athos," said the cardinal. "But now listen to this. It is not from mistrust that I request you to follow me, but for my security. Your companions are no doubt MM. Porthos and Aramis. I know you, gentlemen. I know you are not quite my friends, and I am sorry you are not so."

"Well, upon my honor," said Athos, "your eminence is right in taking us with you. We have seen several ill looking faces on the road, and we have even had a quarrel at the Red Dovecote with four evil looking men whom we were compelled to place hors de combat to protect a lady."

"And was this lady young and handsome?" asked the cardinal, with a certain degree of anxiety.

"We did not see her, monseigneur."

"You did not see her! Ah, very well!" replied the cardinal quickly. "You acted quite rightly in defending a woman. I am going to the Red Dovecote myself. Follow me."

They soon arrived at the silent, solitary inn. No doubt the host knew what illustrious visitor he expected and had consequently sent intruders out of the way.

The cardinal alighted. The three musketeers did so likewise. The cardinal threw the bridle of his horse to his attendant. The three musketeers fastened their horses to the shutter.

The host stood at the door. For him the cardinal was only an officer coming to visit a lady.

"Have you any chamber on the ground floor where these gentlemen can wait near a good fire?" said the cardinal.

The host opened the door of a large room, in which an old bad stove had just been replaced by a large and excellent chimney.

"I have this, monsieur," said he.

"That will do," replied the cardinal. "Come in, gentlemen, and be kind enough to wait for me. I shall not be more than half an hour." And he went upstairs.

It was evident that, without suspecting it and actuated solely by their chivalric and adventurous character, our three friends had just rendered a service to some one the cardinal honored with his particular protection.

Porthos and Aramis placed themselves at the table and began to play at dice. Athos walked about in a contemplative mood.

While thinking and walking Athos passed and repassed before the pipe of the stove, broken in half, the other extremity of which passed into the upper chamber, and every time he passed he heard a murmur of words, which at length fixed his attention. He made a sign to his friends to be silent and listen.

"Listen, milady," said the cardinal, "the affair is important. Sit down and let us talk it over. A small vessel with an English crew, whose captain is mine, awaits you at the mouth of the Charente at Fort de la Poite. He will set sail tomorrow morning. You will allow me to leave first tonight and half an hour after you can go away in your turn."

"You will go to London. When arrived in London you will seek Buckingham."

"I must beg your eminence to observe," said milady, "that since the affair of the studs his grace has been very mistrustful of me."

"Well, this time," said the cardinal,

"It is not the question to steal his confidence, but to present yourself frankly and loyally as a negotiator. You will go to Buckingham on my part, and you will tell him I am acquainted with all the preparations he has made, but that they give me no uneasiness since, at the first step he takes, I will ruin the queen. I have the proofs."

"I must be able to present these proofs to his appreciation."

"Without doubt, and you will tell him I will publish the account of Bois-Robert and of the Marquis de Boncourt upon the interview which the duke had at the residence of Mme. la Comtesse."

At the queen, on the evening Mme. la Comtesse gave a masked fête.

"Very well, monseigneur."

"His coming into and going out of the palace on the night when he introduced himself in the character of an Italian fortune teller."

"Is that all, monseigneur?"

"Tell him also that I am acquainted with all the details of the adventure at Amiens; that I will have a little romance made of it, wittily turned, with a plan of the garden and portraits of the principal actors in that nocturnal romance."

"I will tell him that."

"Tell him, further, Montague is in my power; that Montague is in the Bastille. No letters were found upon him, it is true, but that nature may make him say much of what he knows and even what he does not know. You recollect perfectly all I have told you, do you not?"

"Yes."

"If he persists"—His eminence made a pause and resumed, "If he persists—well, then I shall hope for one of those events which change the destinies of states."

"The only thing to be sought for at this moment is some woman, handsome, young and clever, who has cause of quarrel with the duke."

"No doubt," said milady coolly, "such a woman may be found."

"Well, such a woman, who would place the knife in the hands of a fanatic, would save France."

"Yes, but she would be the accomplice of an assassination. I must ask your eminence for an order which would ratify beforehand all that I should think proper to do for the greatest good of France. And now that I have received the instructions of your eminence as concerns your enemies, monseigneur will permit me to say a few words to him of mine? In the first place, there is a little intriguing woman named Bonacieux."

"She is in the prison of Nantes."

"That is to say, she was there," replied milady, "but the queen has obtained an order from the king by means of which she has been conveyed to a convent. I desire to know which."

"I see nothing inconvenient in that," said the cardinal.

"Well, now I have an enemy much more to be dreaded by me than this little Mme. Bonacieux. It is her lover, that wretch D'Artagnan!"

"He is a bold fellow," said the cardinal. "I must have a proof of his connection with Buckingham. Get me that proof, and I will send him to the Bastille."

"So far, good, monseigneur. But afterward?"

"When once in the Bastille there is no afterward!" said the cardinal in a low voice. "Give me paper, a pen and some ink."

"Here they are, monseigneur."

"We have heard all it was necessary we should hear," said Athos, in a low voice. "Besides, I don't prevent you from listening, but I must be gone."

"You must be gone!" said Porthos.

"And if the cardinal asks for you, what answer can we make?"

"You will not wait till he asks; you will speak first and tell him that I am gone on the lookout, because certain expressions of our host's have given me reason to think the road is not safe. I will say two words about it to the cardinal's attendant likewise; the rest concerns myself, don't be uneasy about that."

CHAPTER XXXIV.

A Conjugal Scene.

AS Athos had foreseen, it was not long before the cardinal came down. He found Porthos playing an earnest game at dice with Aramis.

"What is become of M. Athos?" asked he.

"Monseigneur," replied Porthos, "he is gone as a scout, upon some words of our host, which made him believe the road was not safe."

"Well, will you return now with me?" "We are at your eminence's orders."

The attendant was at the door holding the cardinal's horse by the bridle.

Let us leave him to follow the road to the camp protected by his attendant and the two musketeers and return to Athos.

For some distance he maintained the pace at which he started, but when out of sight he turned his horse to the right, made a circuit and came back within twenty paces of a high hedge, to watch the passage of the little troop. Having recognized his companions and the cardinal's, he waited till they had turned the angle of the road, and having lost sight of them, he returned at a gallop to the inn.

The host recognized him.

"My officer," said Athos, "has forgotten to give a piece of very important information to the lady."

"Go up," said the host. "She is still in her chamber."

Athos went straight into the chamber and closed the door after him.

"Do you know me, madame?" said he.

Milady made one step forward and then drew back as if she had seen a serpent.

"So far well," said Athos, "I perceive you know me."

"The Count de la Fere!" murmured milady, becoming exceedingly pale.

"Yes, milady," replied Athos, "the Count de la Fere in person, who comes expressly from the other world to have the pleasure of paying you a visit. Sit down, madame, and let us talk."

Milady, under the influence of inexpressible terror, sat down without uttering a word.

"You certainly are a demon sent upon the earth!" said Athos. "I thought I had crushed you, madame, but either I was deceived or hell has resuscitated you!"

Milady, at these words which recalled frightful remembrances, hung down her head with a suppressed groan. She arose. Athos remained sitting.

"I wish to tell you that, while remaining invisible to your eyes, I have not lost sight of you."

"You know what I have done and been?"

"I can relate to you day by day your actions from your entrance into the service of the cardinal to this evening."

A smile of incredulity passed over the pale lips of milady.

He recounted to her all he knew of her history, learned from D'Artagnan.

"You will this instant deliver to me the paper the cardinal signed," and overheard during her interview with the cardinal.

"You must be Satan!" cried she.

"Perhaps," said Athos. "But at all events listen well to this. Assassinate the Duke of Buckingham or cause him to be assassinated. I care very little about that. But touch a single hair of D'Artagnan, who is a faithful friend, whom I love and defend, and I swear to you by the head of my father the crime which you shall have endeavored to commit or shall have committed shall be the last."

"Mr. d'Artagnan has cruelly insulted me," said milady in a hollow tone. "Mr. d'Artagnan shall die."

Athos reached his hand to his belt, drew forth a pistol and cocked it.

Milady, pale as a corpse, endeavored to cry out, but her swollen tongue could utter no more than a hoarse sound.

Athos slowly raised his pistol, stretched out his arm so that the weapon almost touched milady's forehead and then in a voice the more terrible from having the supreme calmness of a fixed resolution:

A Gentleman.
A man that's clean inside and out; who neither looks up to the rich nor down on the poor; who can lose without squealing and who can win without bragging; who is considerate of women, children and old people; who is too brave to lie, too generous to cheat, and who takes his share of the world and lets other people have theirs.—New York Sun.

Foley Kidney Pills are healing, strengthening and tonic, and contain no harmful or habit forming drugs. N. J. Gorham, Cashier Bank of Woodville, Woodville, Ga., recently had an acute attack of kidney trouble. "The pains in my back and kidneys were terrible, but I bought a bottle of Foley Kidney Pills and took them, and can truthfully say they have entirely relieved me. I find more benefit from them than from any other kidney medicine I have ever taken." Try them. Refuse any substitute. Badger Drug Co.

IF THIS IS YOUR BIRTHDAY

Keep safe all things which you value. Avoid making changes but do not allow your attention to familiar duties to become indolent. By energy and careful attention to your health you can make the year successful.

Those born today will have unpleasant dispositions, but if trained in self control will make fine characters, as they are naturally intelligent and generous.

Summer colds are hard to get rid of, and frequently lead to asthma, bronchitis, and hay fever. Do not let your cold get a hold on you, but use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for quick relief. W. H. Allen, Chelsea, Wis., says: "We prefer Foley's Honey and Tar Compound to other cough medicines because it quickly cures coughs and colds. It will ward off a cold if taken in time." Contains no opiates. Is safe for children. Remember the name, Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and accept no substitute. Badger Drug Co.

UNCLE WALT

The Post Philosopher

Copyright, 1909, by George Matthew Adams
BY WALT MASON

This world would be better, I wist, and life would be sweeter, I wot, if the fellow who carries a grist of stories as ancient as Lot, would suffer a memory lapse and never more money around to worry industrious chaps with antediluvian sound. This life would be gay, I srow, be more like a bright day in Spring, if people who never knew how would cut out their efforts to sing. The walls and the rumblings and groans of people determined to trill, give us pains in our left collarbones, and often, indeed, make us ill. This life would be finer, I ween, our spirits less likely to flag, if the man with a new auto machine didn't make it his business to brag. For we're tired of the blithering bores who say

NOT ALWAYS A FOOL.
Though she may be when rowing
A rather risky crew,
She does not rock the hammock
When it is holding two.

Find a rival.

that their cars are the best, who talk of their triumphs and scores till we long for the tomb and its rest. This life would be nobler, and death less comfort to people would give, if the man with distillery breath would talk, when he must, through a sieve. For under the sun or the moon there's no one so lacking in grace as the fellow who leaves a saloon, and blows the free lunch in your face.

WISE WOMAN

Elia-Bella has given up playing bridge whist and has thrown her cards in the fire.
Stella—Burned her bridge behind her, so to speak.

In these days of high cost of living, a medicine that gets a man up out of bed and able to work in a few days is a safe and valuable remedy. John Heath, Michigan Bar, Cal., says: "I had kidney and bladder trouble for nearly six years, and was confined to my bed, unable to turn without help. Soon after I commenced using Foley's Kidney Pills and was relieved at once." His example is worth following. Foley's Kidney Pills will do for others just as much as they have done for John Heath. Try them. Badger Drug Co.

What Milton Omitted.
The rebellious angels had just been cast out of heaven. In the swift downward flight, Lucifer overtook Beelzebub.
"What's troubling you, Bub?"
"An old problem," answered the future fowl fiend between somersaults: "Where are we going this fall?"
Lippincott's.

Obeying Injunctions.
"My wife told me yesterday when I came in town to send out a plain cook."
"Did you get one?"
"Did I? I got one whose face is plain enough to stop all the cooks on the block."
